Connectivity and Crime: The Impact of Broadband Availability on Sexual Assaults in India (with Gitanjali Sen), Submitted; Job Market Paper

Abstract: We estimate the impact of internet availability on crime against women by constructing a novel, geocoded village-level dataset on internet connectivity in rural India. We combine scraped geocoordinates of broadband infrastructure with media-reported crime data, internet speed data, and administrative crime records from the National Crime Records Bureau. These are spatially matched to village-level Census data using fuzzy name matching and GIS techniques to ensure accurate alignment. Using spatial regression discontinuity, we find that greater internet access is associated with an increase in reported sexual crimes against women. This appears to be linked to easier access to explicit online content and higher download and upload speeds that facilitate the circulation of such material. We also observe an increase in cyber-crimes against women.

From Workforce to Grandparenting: Navigating the Challenges of Informal Childcare (with Gitanjali Sen), Submitted

Abstract: This study examines the impact of grandchild care on the labor market outcomes of grandparents amid the rapid aging and feminization of the global population. Employing an instrumental variable approach, we find a substantial negative effect on the employment rate of grandmothers, particularly for those cohabiting with their children, while no significant effect is observed for grandfathers. These findings suggest that grandchild caregiving contributes to the gender gap in labor force participation among the elderly, with a more pronounced effect in urban areas. We also find that the reduction in labor supply occurs primarily among younger grandmothers, indicating an early withdrawal from the workforce.
